

SPRING 2019

We are sisters who grew up with parents who were hippies and sellers, upcyclers and life figure-it-outers.

They taught us to be resilient and resourceful.

They taught us how to be artists.

They taught us that there is hardship and joy woven together into every person's tapestry that can be expressed through creativity.

Most of all they taught us what it means to not be perfect. How to ask for forgiveness and how to give it.

There is a strength in the vulnerability it takes to be truly and wholly seen despite our imperfections.

This is where we get our name Iron Orchid and it is core to who we are.

IOD

THIS IS OUR MANIFESTO

1. Everyone is creative and created to be so by the Creator himself.
2. The ability to take something discarded and make it beautiful is a gift.
3. If something is worth making, it's worth making beautifully.
4. Failure is a lovely part of the process, embrace it and look for happy accidents.
5. Like blue jeans vintage never goes out of style.
6. Handmade is always better and imperfections make it perfect.

IOD Decor Transfers™

Your'e going to love IOD Decor Transfers™ for your furniture and decor projects. We've been hard at work on some key improvements. Improvements that make them easier and more pleasurable to use, like our never stick backing (this prevents transfer damage from sticking to the backing sheet), unbreakable rubbing tool, and grid lines for easier trimming. Once you use an IOD Decor Transfer, you'll never go back to other methods.

Salty sea air, sailors, merchants, hurried passengers.
Fighting my suitcase over the uneven wooden ramp,
I searched the crowds for a friendly face.....

Tea, sandwiches and polo. And sometimes too much gin. The stories that lawn could tell. And the rose garden, sitting, as if a queen, in the very center of it all. I think my grandmother placed it there, in part to bother my grandfather. He was not fond of the formalities of an English landscape. But I suppose he came to love it, because it was part of her.

Line dried white linens, breezy and crisp. That's what my mother felt like. She made what other's called "poor" feel like excess. My favorite pictures of her, were the moments when she thought she was alone, humming Irish hymns while she worked. If joy was a sound, it was her voice. Sweet and clear. But she didn't merely sing truth, she lived it.

I looked up, beckoned by the distant call. An animal. I had read that same paragraph three times. The humid air clung to me. It was only supposed to be a month. Four weeks. 28 days. But botany. Another flower discovered. And I couldn't keep him from the passion of discovery. So I soaked up the thick jasmine and iced tea, sprawled across the bamboo chaise, and forced myself to finish that book, that dreadfully long book.

The marble chilled my bare feet. I stood in the foyer, certain she could see my heart thrumping. I had pricked my thumb picking the rose. The sting was little compared to what I had coming. She smelled... like her garden. She knelt, her soft hand lifted my face to her smile. "Don't be afraid little one. Let's go pick more. I'm certain your mum would want a full bouquet."

(à Fleurs simples.)

DESCRIPTION.

C'est un Rosier qui s'élève à peine à la hauteur d'un pied. Ses tiges et ses rameaux sont munis d'aiguillons rougeâtres, épars, plutôt droits que recourbés. Les feuilles se composent de trois ou de cinq folioles glabres sur leurs deux faces, d'un verd gai en-dessus, plus pâles en-dessous, pointues au sommet, arrondies à leur base, finement et simplement dentées. Elles sont portées par un pétiole légèrement pubescent, muni de petits aiguillons crochus qui s'étendent jusque sur la nervure principale de la foliole impaire, ayant à sa base des stipules étroites, bifides, pointues au sommet, glanduleuses en leur bord. Les fleurs, de petite dimension, naissent presque toujours solitaires à l'extrémité des rameaux; les pédoncules qui les supportent sont grêles; on remarque quelques poils glanduleux à leur partie supérieure. Les découpures du calice sont simples, rarement munies d'une ou de deux pinnules. La corolle présente cinq pétales blancs lavés de rose, arrondis à leur sommet. Les tubes des calices sont ovoïdes-oblongs, presque glabres et verdâtres. A la base de chaque pédoncule, caule, ramulis petiolisque aculeatis; floribus solitariis. (N.)

It is our joy and privilege to bring you creative tools. We have a sense of gratitude for the fact that our little business has grown into something that allows us to connect, inspire, and be inspired by independent retailers, and creatives all over the world. Wow. Our tribe stretches across this beautiful globe we share. Humbling.

This journey has taught, and continues to teach us so much. One of the principles that has become core to our business model, is supporting independent retailers. Not only in word, but in deed. We choose to implement policies that ensure that our retailers won't be undercut, so that their sales efforts are supported in a tangible way.

Our products have always shined brightest in the hands of capable stockists who make it their business to be knowledgeable and able to educate their customers in using IOD products. By supporting independent retailers, we support communities. We are a team.

Much love, Josie and Sally, the IOD sisters.
